Q&A

Benefit Make-Up Artist Rachel Wood, who's worked with Vanessa Hudgens and Lily Cole, answers your cosmetic concerns

Long gone

I apply my make-up religiously each morning but by midday it's all gone! What am I doing wrong?

Bess Toomey, 22

STAR LETTER

This could be down to a couple of things, all of which can easily be rectified. First of all look at how you apply your foundation, as using your fingertips means it'll probably be long gone before lunchtime comes around. Instead try painting it on your skin in an up and down motion – like you'd paint a house – using a flat foundation brush for even application. You should also use a primer underneath your make-up, as this works like a barrier on the skin and helps your look last longer – try Benefit Dr Feelgood, $19.50. Finally, dust a touch of translucent powder on top of your make-up to set it – then you're good to go!

Our star letter wins a fab Benefit Coralista, Bad Gal Plum Mascara and Creamless Cream Shadow – worth $50! Want to be next issue's winner?
